

The purpose of this video is to show how EMT instructor Briton Wertz and the entire Southern Guilford community are rallying around Western North Carolina after the area was devastated by Hurricane Helene. Students and school staff held a supply drive, and Ms. Wertz drove the items to Western NC. While there, she also helped out in recovery efforts by cleaning up debris with a small group of people. This video shows the human side of the district and how empathy among people can have a positive impact during a disaster. This video is available on GCS's YouTube page, as well as the district's social media accounts. I think the video articulates how the school district is rallying around hurricane victims.