

The "What's Excused and What's Not" infographic was developed to clarify attendance policies for families and students in Stafford County Public Schools. This visually engaging and easy-to-read graphic effectively breaks down excused versus unexcused absences, helping to reduce confusion and improve attendance awareness. Typically distributed at the start of flu season, this resource aims to address attendance concerns during peak illness periods. Widely shared across social media and school communication channels, the infographic has significantly improved community understanding of attendance expectations.