

As the Detroit Lions embarked on their playoff run, Grand Rapids Public Schools scholars joined in the excitement by participating in a statewide drawing contest held during their art classes. The contest, announced by Governor Gretchen Whitmer, invited Michiganders of all ages to showcase their creativity by submitting their best artistic rendition of the Detroit Lions logo in support of the team. To capture this special moment, our team spent the day with fourth-grade scholars at C.A. Frost Environmental Science Academy, where scholars poured their energy and artistic talent into designing their unique Lions logos. We documented their creativity in a highlight video, which was shared across multiple social media platforms as the Lions geared up for their first playoff game. The video quickly gained traction, resonating with our community and fellow Lions fans across the state.
