

The video series spotlighting every school in the Jackson-Madison County School System offers a unique opportunity to showcase the diverse programs, cultures, and values of each school. By interviewing principals, we highlight the distinct programs that make each school special, while students share their own perspectives on what makes their experience meaningful. For example, students at Andrew Jackson Elementary are choosing kindness while pursuing academic success, and Thelma Barker Elementary provides a welcoming environment for students and families from diverse backgrounds, exemplifying the true value of public education. The series also highlights schools like JCM Middle School, which honors the rich history of JCM High School while adding new traditions to the Green and Gold legacy. Did you know that Community Montessori School (CMS) is the only working public PreK-8 Montessori school in all of Tennessee? These spotlights offer families a glimpse into the various options and opportunities across Jackson-Madison County Schools, helping them understand the unique offerings available within the district.
