  ☐ 3. Coalition-Building/Collaborative Communication Effort
OHSPRA advocates for the field of school PR by demonstrating and publicizing the expertise and importance of communication experts and supporting their continuous improvement and professional development.

The association’s mission is to facilitate support for and trust in education through comprehensive communications, public relations, and marketing efforts. To accomplish this, OHSPRA provides multiple opportunities throughout the year to allow its members to gain relevant, industry-related knowledge, network and form strong relationships with colleagues across the state. The association also promotes collaborative partnerships that provide innovative opportunities to allow members to be on the cutting edge of school PR and current educational initiatives.

For the past few years, OHSPRA has focused extensively on improving the quality of our professional development offerings, and providing a strong fiscal foundation for the chapter. After a review of the 2015-16 OHSPRA PD plan and chapter Goals set at the 2015 Board Retreat during the Board of Directors retreat in June 2016, the OHSPRA Board determined they had met 35 goals/targets in 2015-16, including (to name a few), launching OHSPRA’s new website to better serve our members by continuing the move towards all-electronic awards entries and judging, membership applications/invoicing and member surveys; and trimmed expenses while crafting a plan to boost sponsorship dollars that will better support high-quality PD programming in the future.

Throughout the course of the 2016-17 year, we’ve added additional financial securities by changing the way we budget for Spring Conference to designate more sponsorship money to help pay conference expenses; raising the price of award entries; eliminating the Early Bird membership option, which was not working well; raising the price of Spring Conference to bring the cost more in line with what other similar associations are charging; eliminating the networking social event at OSBA’s Capital Conference, which has not been well-attended the past few years; and upping the amount of sponsorship dollars brought in to an amazing $16,500 this year! All of this has put the chapter in a much more fiscally secure position and (for the first time in several years) has allowed the Board to focus more on providing strong PD programming than worrying about the budget.

The OHSPRA Board of Directors is comprised of some of Ohio’s top school communicators, allowing the Board to keep up with the latest news and trends. While maintaining current partnerships with other educational and communication organizations (Ohio Department of Education, SchoolMessenger, Ohio School Boards Association, Buckeye Association of School Administrators, Public Relations Society of America), the Board desired to develop even more partnerships and sponsorships to implement professional development events for our 139 members and 89 member districts/organizations. Additional sponsorships were formed in 2016-17 with entities such as The Impact Group and eSchoolView, while continuing our partnerships with groups such as Sandy Hook Promise, PeachJar, MyVRSpot, SiteImprove and Battelle for Kids.

As in the past, in 2016-17, OHSPRA PD events and initiatives included a day-long October workshop which brought in more than three times the registrants when compared to the same workshop last year (22 participants in 2015 and 63 in 2016!); presentations by OHSPRA members during two sessions at OSBA’s Capital Conference; a mentor program for those new to school PR; an awards program to help members benchmark practices and advocate for their positions (provides recognition and feedback on how to improve and what to keep doing well); and a 2-day Spring Conference in March (#AmplifyYourStory — more than 110 attended in 2017). OHSPRA also provided a conference scholarship to help a member who could not afford conference.
Chapter communications focused on providing PD by highlighting best practices, news and resources in our “Snapshot” (including member spotlights) newsletter, on Facebook and Twitter and in refining the website, which launched in April 2016. Our members now enjoy a faster website with a responsive, sleek design and more robust resources available in the members-only Networking Center (sends emails to all members who have signed up) and Resource Center, which allows members to share and store communication materials for the future use.
